Integrating Content and Language in Multilingual Universities

Local linguistic diversity and growing teacher and student mobility in higher education (HE) around the world have resulted in increasingly multilingual teaching and learning contexts. This has provided HE institutions opportunities to offer instruction in more than one language—usually the local language and English, but also a possibility to add other languages.

The 5th ICLHE Conference addresses how focused language instruction/assessment can be utilized as foundation for disciplinary content learning, with specific consideration of the diverse student and teacher backgrounds.

Keynote speakers

- Emma Dafouz, Complutense University of Madrid
A multi-dimensional approach to multilingual repertoires in the international university
- Anne Holmen, University of Copenhagen
ICL and multilingualism: The role of other languages than English in an international university
- Diane Pecorari, City University of Hong Kong
Through a glass, darkly; or how reflective practice can maximise the impact of ICL
